

Yan Mujiyanto, born in Muntilan on 13 December 1953, obtained his diploma degree in the English Department of IKIP (then Universitas Negeri) Semarang in 1976. While dedicating himself as a teacher at a private secondary school, vocational school, and then high school, he continued his studies and obtained his Bachelor of Education in English Language Teaching from IKIP Semarang in 1981. Since that time, he devoted his attention to the teaching of English as a foreign language in higher education. The advanced education he has gained is Graduate Diploma in TEFL Sydney University (1989), Graduate Diploma in Translation / Interpreting Deakin University Melbourne (1992), Master of Humanities University of Indonesia (1998), and Doctorate of Language Education at Semarang State University (2011). The educational institution where he is anchored is IKIP Semarang which later became Universitas Negeri Semarang (1983 - present), where he obtained a professorship in applied linguistics in 2016. In addition, he taught English at Muria Kudus University (1981 - 1995), Academy of Radiator Stain Semarang (1985-1991), University of Tidar Magelang (1993-1995), and Dharma Persada University Jakarta (1997-1999). As an expert and practitioner in translation, he has translated and edited translations of numerous scientific books, written many research-based and conceptual articles on translation, translating and interpreting, presented papers in international conferences, and been appointed instructor of various translation training. His fields of study include Sociolinguistics, Translation, Language philosophy, and Research in Language Instruction.